KawaJirusuki_HentaiGamer - kawa jirusuki.Toddlers to teens with kids of their own. I love hearing about parents, couples, friends and their children, tales from their road to parenthood. Tuesday, November 26, 2009 Win-Win Well, here's another example of how much we all want to win the whole parenting game. Strictly speaking, though, the job isn't really hers to have done. I mean, she certainly has been a lot of help, and sometimes I've pushed her to the point that she felt like the hostess with the mostest. But she's an only child, and she's not competitive, which has been a kind of difficult balance to strike. She's game, but she isn't aggressive. Case in point: When Charlotte was between 1 and 2 years, I finally decided that she was old enough to be getting up on her own and I'd teach her how. Of course, after about an hour of pushing, wiping and exhortations, she was ready to give it up. We were in the den, where she'd been sitting. She stood up to stretch and I reached over to put her down. I didn't look up, or realize she was probably going to be much taller than me, but she went from sitting down to standing on my lap. I was in shock for about 10 seconds before I quickly jumped up and held her to me. "Oh no, no, no, you're not going to fall!" she squealed, her short fists digging into my shirt. I picked her up and stood her on the floor, but she was too 3da54e8ca3
