Q: MySQL Join Select Statement What I am trying to do, and I'm sure it's pretty simple, is to append a subselect result to the original SELECT statement. The subselect results up to 5 parent queries with a common ID to the parent query. I tried doing this in 2 ways, neither of which work (they return an empty array). My first attempt was to set the from_parent to a var. And then after the SELECT statement, append what I wanted. (Let's call this attempt A): $from_parent = "SELECT from1, from2, from3, from4, from5 FROM ". $parent; $subselect = $wpdb->get_results($from_parent); $wpdb->query("SELECT * FROM (".$subselect.")"); Attempt B: $s = $wpdb->get_results($subselect = $wpdb->get_results($from_parent); $wpdb->query("SELECT * FROM (".$s.")"); The first thing I was wondering, was why would I need to wrap a result set into an array (OR maybe use the get_results() function?) Secondly, I will need to run the append statement a few hundred times. So ideally it would be better not to create the database calls two hundred times. I was hoping to set up a loop that runs the statements for me. I just get an empty array back. Any ideas? A: You use get_results to get resultsets from database, not set. When you use "getting results from previous query" as your query you should use get_results function to get results from. You can get your result set as array from: $from_parent = "SELECT from1, from2, from3, from4, from5 FROM ". $parent; $subquery = $wpdb->get_results($from_parent); // Get the names of columns in the result set $nameColumns = array_keys($subquery); // Get all the names of columns $columnNames = array_merge($nameColumns, array_keys($parent)); // Print all the results $results = array
