Q: IE8 NetStream.play() pops video too fast, so stuck in a loop I use Adobe Air to display a timeline (30 seconds) of videos. The timeline is animated by changing the source of the NetStream every 10 seconds, and every time that happens, it plays an unskipframe video. On the PC, this worked great on Chrome, Firefox and IE8. On IE8, once a video that plays on its own (that means, using NetStream.play()) pops up, if the user clicks "back" in the timeline, it will just keep popping up and not being able to go back to the last video. Also, if the user wants to go back to the last video, it will get stuck in a loop. On Chrome and Firefox, this only happens when using the NetStream.play() function for the very first time. The second time it plays, it works fine. I have no idea what to do. The problematic HTML page uses the following javascript: function playTracks() { document.getElementById('currentTime').innerHTML = '0:00'; document.getElementById('currentTime').innerHTML = '0:10'; document.getElementById('currentTime').innerHTML = '0:20'; } var time; var playing=false; var duration; var currentTime; var player; var swf; var myNetStream; var myMediaStream; init(); function init() { document.getElementById('playerWrapper').innerHTML = '' + ' ' + ' ' + ' ' + '
