Nov. 8, 2012 Â- australia s funeral director and website specialist in. UK Family Funeral Directors and Funeral Service. A: from PEP 570, a value of subprogid is expected, so the parser won't use the thing as a subprogram, and it won't try to parse subprograms as subprograms. Python does provide some support for these cases: There is a slightly-documented and slightly-warning-enabled "compile-time" operator `__subprogram__` to interpret a cell value as a subprogram name. For example, `cell(1, 1) = __subprogram__("foo")` will cause `foo` to be interpreted as a subprogram of `cell`. or, If a cell value begins with `__`, it is interpreted as a cell value constructor: `cell("2", 2) --> cell(2, 2)`. If this is nested inside a function or a class, the `cell()` will be interpreted as an `unpack`, and the items will be interpreted as a tuple of arguments. What that means is, you can create subprograms from Python code, if you want to. For example: `a = [1, 2, 3] def f(a): a[0] = __subprogram__('a.pop') a[1] = __subprogram__('sorted') def g(a): return sorted(a) print f(a) # [3, 2, 1] print g(a) # [3, 2, 1]` [Dilated cardiomyopathy: a clinical study of 85 patients]. Among 85 patients with dilated cardiomyopathy 81 cases (95%) were idiopathic, most of whom have a stable and mild form of the disease. Four cases
