This technology has been developed for the very first time in-house, powered by an entirely new engine. It tracks movement, analysis, data and detailed input into each player - allowing for an entirely new level of in-depth, interactive, and fluid gameplay. New tools deliver on-ball intelligence; provide more exact ball physics, and accurate ball collisions, helping to increase the frequency of strikes, and the speed at which the ball travels. Under-pressure situations are even easier to predict - whether that be the positioning of a defender, or that the pass was too slow to pick up pace. HyperMotion Technology also includes AI improvements, representing players as completely new game characters. This eliminates the need for atypical and sometimes unexpected sub-typing to represent real-life players. FIFA Ultimate Team mode is also improved; Daily Challenges have been completely reworked and provide more variety and reward for players to experience what they want from the mode. Some of the "favoured" challenges include winning a large amount of coins, earning a specific number of FIFA points, or scoring a large amount of goals. Other Challenges will include "skill challenges," which may ask players to perform specific actions accurately, such as scoring a certain number of goals after a specific number of touches, or dribbling the ball a specific distance. There will also be "coach challenge" style challenges, where players will need to guide their players through a game tactically - for example, when they are defending, when they need to attack, etc. Additionally, players can use their coins to obtain "Ultimate Boosters," which offer special bonuses in-game. These can range from a "Superstar Player", to "Genius", as well as new potential to acquire when completing Challenges. The next FIFA is in your hands.
