Berlin Brandenburg International Airport is the city's main airport, it started operations on 12th of November 2018 with a huge delay of four years after breaking ground in 2007. Since its reopening on 2nd of November, it has quickly become a key facility for Germany's foreign relations and has therefore become a key target for the Bundeswehr. An additional reason for this reopening can be the requirements for the introduction of a first class airport for Germany. The new airport is located in the northern part of Berlin, directly next to the former airport to the south. The area is well-connected to the city's public transport network, has 2,100 aircraft movements per day, and is only about 14 km from the center of the German capital. Build your dream airport and invest in it like a business, expand and upgrade it, or keep it at a historical level to fit your needs. You are ready to go; let the good times roll.
