I am using the AWS Ruby SDK to manage S3. I'm using the aws-sdk gem to connect. I've created the AWS::S3::Bucket resource: `aws_s3_bucket = Aws::S3::Resource.new(:name => "my-bucket", :s3_endpoint => "", :access_key => "my-bucket-access-key", :secret_key => "my-bucket-secret-key")` This creates a bucket: my-bucket I am using the aws-sdk gem to upload files. `File.open("some-file.ext", "w") do |io| io.write("test") end` This creates a file called "some-file.ext" When I upload this file to the bucket "my-bucket" with the access key and secret key set I am expecting to see that the access key and secret key are set to that bucket. Instead, I am seeing my-bucket-access-key and my-bucket-secret-key. Can I not set the access key and secret key on a per-resource basis? A: For some reason, a resource can have a lifetime. If you want the resource to live longer than the time you create it, you should call a temporary copy of the resource.

aws_s3_bucket = Aws::S3::Resource.new(:name => "my-bucket",
