My accountTufts University to Evite Students, Instruct 'Tooke' Students in Tufts University's engineering school are being reminded that an active dildo is prohibited on campus for safety reasons. An e-mail alerting the class of about 350 students about the policy was sent out on Wednesday by Brian Tooke, associate dean for academic affairs in the engineering school. "The safety and security of your classmates and fellow students is our first and only priority," Tooke wrote. "In order to ensure a safe learning environment, you are prohibited from bringing any objects that you feel would pose a safety risk to any student or faculty member." The e-mail came in the wake of The Tufts Daily asking for an update on the size of the dildo, which had some students concerned about the safety of handling it. Tooke said the college does not have a "Pilate dildo" in its possession, but that such an object is "certainly available online." "The point of the rule is to let you know that this activity is against campus policy and that if you see anyone engaging in this activity, we ask that you take prompt action," he wrote. "This is, after all, a safety rule." The engineering college is not the only school at Tufts to come under fire in recent weeks over students' creative use of props. The college was outed last week as the source of a "Tookey" -- a fake "dildo" made of Sculpey clay. Students at Tufts and the University of Massachusetts Amherst have been keeping up a website, "Tooke's Dildo", that is aimed at raising awareness about the extent to which students' prop use has become an issue in dorms across the two campuses. UMass is estimated to have produced more than 1,500 Doodie Dolls in the last decade. Tooke acknowledged that he was "aware of the Tookey" and had received inquiries from students about it, but he added that "We definitely want our students to be aware of campus policy, and to take responsibility for their actions and ensure that they do not detract from a safe learning environment." In addition to dildos, organizers of the "Dildo Carnival

The resulting samples were cleaved and analyzed with Auger electron spectroscopy (AES). A typical spectrum is shown in Figure 4{ref-type="fig"}(#fig4){ref-type="fig"}. The very clear and well-resolved species with $Z^* = 25$ reveal the presence of atoms of the elements contained in the α -PdPt nanoparticles and the substrate. The most prominent peak of Au associated with the particle is observed at a binding energy of about 92 eV. !Auger spectrum (pseudo-colour plot, obtained with a bin size of 3 eV) of Au-coated PdPt nanoparticles recorded on a highly oriented pyrolytic graphite substrate after an electron-beam evaporation of 3.4 Å/s at an angle of 22° with respect to the surface normal and a coverage of 10 mg/cm². The energies of the peaks are indicated in eV. The nominal binding energies of the Au, Pt, and O atomic species are indicated by Au 2p, Pt 3d, and O 1s, respectively.](ja9b06121_0004){#fig4} The substrate peaks which appear in the AEDS at about 58 eV, 128 eV, and 250 eV can be attributed to the carbon K β -1~, K β -2~, and K α -1~ peaks, respectively.^[@ref23],[@ref24],[@ref27]^ The AES data clearly show that PdPt alloy nanoparticles are coated with a protective layer of gold as confirmed by the higher Au/Pd ratio with respect to the nominal atomic ratio of 1.7.
