CPUresistor Serial Key is a free utility for viewing the current CPU utilization on your computer. It also includes a timer that can record the CPU idle time per application and the CPU idle time total. CPUresistor uses dual values to calculate the CPU utilization and the idle time.Q: What alternative for the [no-thread] tag? We have the no-thread tag that currently has no questions and no answers. I'd like to propose changing this tag to question-or-answer-only. This tag was the result of adding a question-only tag to a question that had two questions. I didn't like that and I'm not the only one. Also, this tag was made by a user who recently changed the tag to question-only. I don't think we should let that happen again.

A: I'm all in favor of removing this tag. I read this as a duplicate of Threading and multithreaded programming and see no reason to create a new tag. Q: Scalate - WebSocket Client without using Request I am trying to create a web socket client which can be used by multiple users. The purpose is to get the HttpContent object from URL, forward it to a service and get back the response. I have created a Scalate template which is able to serve the HttpContent object.

@Parameter( params = "ws ") var wsUrl : String @Parameter( params = "") var
serviceUrl:String @WebSocketS
ervlet("/ws/{serviceUrl}") class MyServlet extends Servlet { def doGet( get:
HttpServletRequest, get: HttpServletResponse ) { val content = get( "content" ) sendResponse( get,
HttpServletResponse.SC_OK,
content ) } def sendResponse( get: HttpServletRequest, status: Int, getContent: HttpContent ){ getContent.bodyStream.write(

getContent.body, "utf-8") } The template then forwards the HttpContent object (image content, json) to a service and it comes back to the client as a "success" response. But the problem here is, that I have to hard code b7e8fdf5c8
