What's new in Elden Ring:

on reading fanfiction

A few days ago I set myself a goal to read 30 mangas in 30 days. Actually, it is a little more of a challenge than that. I don't use a scheduler and there were some days I was not sure if I was going to be able to stick to that amount. (I was working at the time and I had a lot of free time.) But at the end of the month I made it to 30 and I am glad I gave myself that challenge. I read everything I could and had the chance to connect with many new people, to discuss many things and to share my own opinions on lots of topics.

Usually I feel more comfortable reading fanfiction than I do reading real things. I have read fan-made stories, online stories and my own.

There are plenty of people out there to do that already. Instead, I want to share what I have learned from the short time I have had to explore the potential and the flaws of this online medium.

So, what about my 30 days?

My first experience with writing fanfiction was when I first met Naito
