Efficacy and tolerability of ketoprofen and acetaminophen analgesia following gynaecological laparoscopy. A double-blind, parallel group trial was performed to compare the efficacy and tolerability of ketoprofen and acetaminophen used as analgesia after gynaecological laparoscopy. Two hundred and sixty six patients were recruited. Pain was assessed at 10, 30, 60, 90, 120, 180 and 240 min after the operation. Tolerability was evaluated at the same times using a questionnaire. With all methods of pain assessment, the drugs were found to be equally effective at relieving pain for the first 180 min. At 240 min after the operation patients assessed the pain associated with taking acetaminophen as significantly worse than ketop
