Q: Input Field with line breaks? As you can see i have a form that has in one field a description, it consists of several lines. The problem is if a user will enter a description like this: "But to get the most out of it you need some understanding of networking. Following this i would spend several more years on the same subject." Is there anyway i can make this in the html code and still have the line breaks? I tried textarea and and both gives me a field but without any line breaks.. A: To parse a multiline text is a lot of work. You need to split the text by the line breaks and then make each of the lines separate elements. Check out jQuery's `_.wrap` method for doing this. This will make each line of your description a separate element, and if a user enters a description with line breaks, you can put them in one element. House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) and Rep. John Lewis (D-Ga.) sit at the start of the Democratic response to the State of the Union address. (AP Photo/J. Scott Applewhite) (Newser) – The House Democratic leader effectively censured President Obama, ripping into the president for comparing Republicans to “worried and frustrated parents” who want their children to succeed. “[O]ur elected officials should be acting like ‘caring, effective and engaged parents,’” she said, drawing applause and standing ovations from the audience at the start of the Democrats’ response to Obama’s speech. Rep. John Lewis’ (D-Ga.) speech drew similar treatment from the president, who praised his “courage” and “caring heart.” Q: How to make a Navigation bar that doesn't include the 'back' button using Titanium Mobile? I am trying to make a 'back' button that doesn't include the button (normally located on the left side of the navigation bar) that goes back to the previous page. I am new to Titanium Mobile and I am wondering how it would be possible to make it so that the back button to go back to the previous page would be removed and that the pages are a 'stack', therefore I can just hide all the current active window.
