The Discovery Early Access rollout has begun! Here's what you need to know: 1.The Discovery Early Access rollout has begun! Here's what you need to know: 2.We'll be supporting PC builds for at least three to four weeks before we enter closed beta. 3.We're working with our community to design and create the best possible version of the expansion and will actively engage with you to ensure that we build what you want. 4.The expansion launches with a lot of new features but doesn't currently support cross-server play. 5.We're still finalising the map and balancing of the game. The map is designed for PvP. 6.More info about this content below!

This Game Uses:Discovery Early Access (FE) will give everyone the chance to play a long term beta test of the final version of the game. We'll be able to change the game as needed as we implement new features, test out game changes, and just see where we're going next.Discovery Early Access will be the best way for us to test all of the new ideas, concepts and mechanics we're planning. So, if you like what you see and think you can help us make the best version of the game then join us in our journey.Please note: The Discovery Early Access beta will be separate to the public Early Access (beta). Your progress in the beta will NOT carry over to the public EA. The beta will be similar to a Closed Beta but with different rules - we'll be using In-Game Chat instead of the public game's forums, and we'll be trying to limit the number of testers on the server so you'll only be able to play with us and/or some of the dedicated members of the development team. It is intended for those of you who are interested in helping us shape the future of the game and have the opportunity to do this by being in the beta group.If you are an existing Discovery player then there will be no additional or new requirements for you to join the Discovery Early Access beta. If you'd like to know more about the Discovery Early Access beta, including when it will be starting and what you need to do, click here: This is a Beta Build:New Features, Changes and Additions to the GameNew maps & creature capture options Players can now tame a baby dragon.

What's new in MOAI: Build Your Dream:

Deadly... Again! On my birthday a few weeks ago, my little sister made me an incredible, life-affirming gift — a lunchbox collection of my cartoons broken down from me by a few years. "Ugh. The artbook has to go back out. It's dead. A bandaid is pinned over it with the rest of the collection," she said sadly. So the day came when she was going to unpack the beautiful, boxy, hot pink lunchbox and hold the project in her hands as her life's work. (Isn't she too lovely for the profession of cartoonist?) It wasn't an easy decision, of course. So many of us hope, and joke, that once our artbooks print, they're immortalized forever. Sometimes they are, in the form of old fliers and other relics. Anyway, my sister! I'm humbled, in all actuality, that she opted to donate the artbook so I could look at it once more. 1. It arrived, not dead, but not alive. Initially, we pinned the artwork out to admire on the walls while we waited for the artbook to come through again. My sister washed it, ironed it, zipped it up, xeroxed it. The process took forever because I'm doing my homework in the corner (yes, I know I'm a space case, but bear with me). My sister kept coming over at weird times and poking her head in. I could hear her whisper the criticisms loudly. “How long, exactly, are we meant to look at this without eating, smelling this, or touching?” she asked. “I imagine a certain amount of time.” “Well, they should put a note saying ‘Do not eat while using.’ It’s very informative and scary.” In other words, “No, we shouldn’t put toxins in our bodies!” “I made it for you,” I said, smiling falsely. “Thank you. I have to go eat.” My sister came in one more time and asked, “Oh, you know, I did think that it would be weird if he just sent the artbook and we didn’t know it was yours.🔪”
