Hussein also said his office has heard from people in the community who are eager to see the strip club shut down. "They don't want that business," Hussein said. 'A safe and clean environment' Camacho agreed that the strip club doesn't contribute to the community. "The city is trying to portray that it's a family oriented business. "They're not promoting family values," Cannizzaro said. "The you cannizzaro said. "The vise promoting lewd and lascivious behavior." Phil Bairett, a former police chief in Summerville, said he felt the business would generate crime. "When you have a business that is luring crowds of people
