TONY CENETA Batangas, Philippines — The Supreme Court has denied the petition for a review filed by former President Fidel V. Ramos and has affirmed the Court's Jan. 26, 2012, decision dismissing the "urgent petition" filed by the Aquino family. "The court cannot interfere with the disposition of the case," an SC spokesperson told The Manila Times. The Filipino electorate went to the polls in 2010 to choose an 11th president after Aquino's father, former President Corazon C. Aquino, who led them to the biggest change in history of the country, died in June 2009. According to the SC, Ramos' candidature for the presidency was filed on Sept. 22, 2011, eight days before the 2010 elections. The selection of the candidates for the post of president and vice president was the responsibility of the Commission on Elections. On Jan. 26, 2012, the SC's panel on election matters affirmed the decision of the CEN on the grounds that the Ramos' candidature for the presidency was filed after the CEN's deadline of Sept. 30, 2010. Ramos and his sister, former Senator and widow Imelda Marcos, had accused Aquino of using his political clout to rig the elections. Ramos and Marcos both later sued Aquino, co-accused of wrongdoings during his term in office. Aquino's administration, meanwhile, had accused Ramos of violating the Code of Conduct and Ethical Standards for Public Officials and Employees by "feeding" the public about his sister's assets and bank accounts.
