I have tried to do the following so far: Verified my USB port to be USB 2.0 (so then the USB3.0 switch should not be the problem?) Turned my laptop "Off" and "On" again and again to make sure its not a hardware problem The problem is still here. I am running Windows 10 Home Edition and the USB device is connected through Microsoft's Universal Serial Bus system. A: The problem was that my hard drive was failing. I had to reformat my hard drive and now it works. Q: Set Minimum and Maximum values for UISlider I want to set minimum and maximum values to UISlider. For that I am using this code. `uislider.minimumValue = minVal; uislider.maximumValue = maxVal;` But it does not change the value, it only places it's place. How can I make it work properly? A: Works fine in iOS 6.0 Simulator, when you try this `self.slider.maximumValue = 1; self.slider.minimumValue = 0.5; self.slider.value = 0.5; self.slider.value = 0.5; NSLog(@"%f", self.slider.value);` output : 2014-09-21 20:31:31.099 TIC[416:11303] 0.500000 Functional equilibrium of both fingers of the hand during a bipedal adaptation to running. The functional contribution of the right and the left hand to bipedal running has not been previously analyzed. We investigated the functional interrelation between the fingers of each hand, using the body sway rate (BSR) while running. Subjects were asked to place the dominant hand on a force platform for the quantitative analysis of the BSR during running at 4.8 m/s, including the transition from creeping to self-propulsion. Each index finger of the hand was analyzed separately. Subjects were required to run with the swinging motion of the ball of the foot with the midfoot on the force platform. The contribution of each finger was evaluated with the ratio of BSR between the fingers when the respective finger was lifted during the swing phase of the bipedal adaptation to running. The BSR ratio of the middle finger was significantly larger 6d1f23a050
