an update to PDF compressor software allows users to create and edit PDF files from Acrobat Pro XI. In addition, full Word processing capabilities allow you to add hyperlinks, Word's built-in spell checking, footnotes, and easy access to the Insert panel. Before going further it is very important to remember that this is a Beta version so there is some potential issues. The latest version of PDF Compressor will not run on earlier versions of Acrobat XI or on the Acrobat Pro XI beta version. In Acrobat Pro XI, you can make multiple versions of the same PDF file, and PDF Compressor can also make multiple versions of the same PDF file. An important feature of this new PDF Compressor is that you can create multiple versions of a PDF file (which have different names) without having to reinstall Acrobat. You can use the free PDF Editor in Acrobat to create multiple PDF files that are not related to one another. The options are displayed by choosing the File > Choose PDF Options dialog box and selecting the PDF Compression Options as a preview of this new feature in Acrobat XI, which is now available in the Mac App Store for purchase and download. (Download from the Mac App Store is a new feature of Acrobat XI). To keep this tutorial focused on the PDF file creation, we will not be showing any of the advanced features that the software provides. Instead, we will concentrate on the process of creating multiple versions of a single PDF file. To start the process, launch Acrobat and create a new document. When the New Document window opens, It allows you to load the pages from any or all of the following locations. From top to bottom: Windows, Mac OS, and Internet. Method 1: If You Have Windows In the Windows version of Acrobat, select File | Open to open the PDF import options. Note that you can select Open from Other, Local Disk (C:) or My Network Places. The Import Window (left) opens. Method 2: If You Have Mac OS X Launch the Acrobat Reader and open the PDF file. Note: Make sure you are opening your PDF file. Select File | Open (right) to open the PDF import options. The Import Window (left) opens. By default, Acrobat will import the pages as a single PDF file. There is no way to import the pages into separate PDF files
