One is the "classical" *nix way: JACK.Q: Custom DNS: 2 additional ACKs between two servers Having a setup with a couple of servers and a couple of custom DNS servers, for a couple of years. "A" server has a couple of records to "B" DNS I need to know if the additional ACKs are done by the "B" DNS server or by the clients. For example if the acks are done in both sides, in my case, is it an ok setup or am I having problems? I'm asking because I'm facing a couple of problems, specially if the request comes into the "A" DNS, the DNS server replies with an additional ACK, and the client has to be sure of the DNS reply, so it's a half-duplex service (one of my DNS servers has a failover in case of outage, but when there's no outage, the whole service is half duplex). A: The extra ACKs are from your server to your client (nothing to do with the server that you're delegating to). Any queries from your clients (directly or through a proxy) to the delegating DNS server will arrive in sequence, one ACK, one record, and one more ACK. Batido Batido was a 10cc comedy show presented by Peter Sissons in 1978 and featuring various sketches and one-liners. Sissons played the roles of both host and leading performer. The show was broadcast on BBC One in the United Kingdom and also screened in the United States on Channel 4, Boston and in Toronto on CityTV. It was usually broadcast on Sunday afternoons, and was seen by around 17 million viewers. Synopsis The show, produced by BBC Enterprises, ran for three series, the second of which also featured performances from Vicki Frost (Mary Whitehouse), Eric Idle (Monty Python), Graham Chapman (Monty Python), Patrick McGo 6d1f23a050
