This is the X-Men meeting the Breakfast Club. When five misfit superheroes must figure out a way to escape custody and save the school from a supervillain... After yet another failed superhero team, there wasn't enough room for a seat at Breakfast and they decided to make a movie. In the end, they shoot a short film, but something went wrong, and they get a full-fledged movie, with characters, characters and a not-so-bad plot. But the main thing for them is not the idea, but how their story will be perceived. For them, it is more important how the viewer reacts to the picture - after all, in this format it is easier to prove that all this was in fact, and that they are not a "cardboardâ€∏ fiction.
