Deadpool Repack v1.0 Torrentz lists hundreds of thousands of users who have uploaded and distributed Deadpool . The game was announced in May 2014 as a collaboration between 20th Century Fox and video game developer Rocksteady Studios. Publisher Take-Two Interactive released a video on YouTube in July 2014 .Q: How to convert the 'token' structure of htaccess to.htaccess? I have the following.htaccess file for URL rewriting and I can see that it is encoded in JSON format: { "domain": { "type": "domain", "id": "vegahm@aol.com" }, "subdomain": { "type": "subdomain", "id": "aol" } } How to convert this format to.htaccess one? Note: I do not want to use swagger to generate the.htaccess file. A: The best way to generate the.htaccess file is to use the built-in Mod Rewrite Api from your Apache server to do so. I had a similar situation a while back, and indeed - since I had a PHP service that was hooked up to an Apache server - it was far better to generate my.htaccess file via the Mod Rewrite Api, rather than swagger, because I could generate the same.htaccess file directly (without the need to generate my swagger files, and I can simply use and reuse the generated.htaccess file), and - if I wanted to regenerate the htaccess file again later on - I'd just pass it the same object I generated the htaccess file with, i.e., $data. If you're using a C#.NET service, you can simply call the build-in Mod Rewrite Api from your server: var result = await HostingEnvironment.OpenWebAppAsync("", app, options); var file = "file:///Users/mike/Desktop/test.htaccess"; var data = Newtonsoft.Json.JsonConvert.SerializeObject(result); await File.WriteAllTextAsync(file, data); Q
