Mucuk, İsmet, Enerji, 2004. 2004 12. 26.45 2002.CALGARY - It is easy to forget about this. It is as easy as over the past nine games. The Winnipeg Jets have won nine straight games and five straight on the road. They are winning because their players are making plays and their goaltending has been solid. The problem is, they aren't winning because of their own stuff. They aren't making the most of the opportunities they do get, the power play is failing to convert, they are on a power play goal drought and they aren't finding the back of the net. The Jets even had a two-goal lead at home against the Dallas Stars and failed to score for the first time in the past nine games. "Every time we haven't scored, I'm not satisfied," Jets coach Paul Maurice said on Saturday. "Nothing seems to be the right decision." Why do they always seem to be one thing away from a goal? The inability to convert, despite the big opportunities they are getting, is what has been killing them. "We are not capitalizing on our opportunities, that's a concern," said centre Paul Stastny. "We are not scoring on our opportunities. We're not capitalizing on our opportunities and we
