ReadWrite has a Crop function that allows you to grab rectangular areas of the active window. Simply use the F2 key to move the selection rectangle around and press the left mouse button to copy the image to the clipboard. You can also use the F1 key to set the target clip size. Here are some of the features included in ReadWrite: The ability to have more than one image open at a time Thumbnail-like preview of the image Keyboard-shortcut to easily navigate through the images Resize, move and copy your images ... and many more! If you want to try out ReadWrite or don't have a lot of time to let ReadWrite help you, then you can download it now for free from For the full screen image capture and preview capabilities, I would recommend taking a look at the free PhotoAlbumX4 program. If you want to try it out, then you can download it from Do you need to capture an image from your computer monitor but you don't have the screen grabber software that you would normally use to capture the screen? If you would like to use the screen capture program to capture an image from the monitor, there is a free screen capture software for you to try called WriteMagic - You simply enter a text message in the text box and then press the Print Screen button. The next time you log back into the computer, you can view the screen capture as a Windows screen shot image and you can also print the image. I know it is not the same as a screen capture program, but it does the trick for capturing an image from the monitor.
