An electron beam irradiation technique for the study of photocatalytic reactions. The use of an electron beam irradiation technique for studying photocatalytic reactions is described. It combines the advantages of flash photolysis experiments with the stability and reproducibility of electron beam irradiation. The technique is demonstrated in the study of the excitation mechanism and the decomposition of carbon tetrachloride. The method is discussed in relation to the design of the experimental set-up. Q: How to query with an Entity using Linq to Sql I am using Linq to SQL to create a database and to query this database. I have a data class called Quotation that is defined as follows: public class Quotation { public Guid QuotationID { get; set; } public string QuotationNumber { get; set; } public decimal OverdueValue { get; set; } } I have a query that needs to retrieve all records with a total overdue value of '500', if the total amount is greater than 500, I would like it to return 1 record (the one with the lowest total due). I have the following code: IEnumerable GetTotalDue() { var query = from o in Quotations.Where(s => s.QuotationNumber == "TEST") where ((s.OverdueValue s.OverdueValue),
