Lifestyle New Year's resolutions, finally at the end of January! What a way to start the new year off right! Here are seven things that will help you achieve the new year's resolutions by the time January 31st rolls around: Aim for more physical activity New Year's resolutions are about balancing our lives between work and play. Work expands to encompass more activities, while play goes from only play and drudgery to fun and adventure. One way to make work/play balance is to make your day more physically active. Include walking, jogging, and riding your bike. Take the stairs and don't rely on the elevator to go to the top floor. Play a sport, whether it's squash, tennis, or yoga. Take up a new skill, such as playing guitar, cooking, or hand lettering. Plan a romantic getaway Next on your list is planning a romantic getaway. Have you ever done a deep cleanse or detox? If you haven't, then it's probably time to do so. While this is a good time to re-focus on your physical health and wellness, take the time to not only plan a romantic getaway, but to actually go on one. Relaxation, solitude, and time to recover from the usual stress of daily life will help you to handle everything else with a smile on your face. Have a lot of fun When you are feeling stressed out, whether it's a loss of a loved one or putting yourself in a challenging situation to achieve a goal, you are more likely to get depressed and less likely to have fun. Doing something fun makes you happier and healthier. Play and have a lot of fun at your new year's resolutions. Invest in your health and wellness Another good way to start off the new year is to do a deep cleanse and detox. It's a terrific way to start the new year off right! Your body needs to get off the junk food that has been stored in your gut. This is the perfect time to do a spiritual cleanse that will help you let go of the past and be open to a new year. The Teenager Congress Committee has demanded a probe into the alleged involvement of former actress Jy
